FRENCH AND ITALIANS REPORT GAINS; TURKS LOSE FORT

United States, and that there will be no more submarine attacks upon neutral ships and unarmed passenger ships.

There is reason for believing that the President will tell the Ambassador to send word to the Kaiser that while the United States is most desirous of remaining at peace, there must be a change in Germany's policy and the Lusitania affair cannot be repeated.

Developments of the past few days disclose that there are evidently two parties at work in the Berlin Government. The Ambassador belongs to the group that is strongly urging the wisdom, even the vital necessity, of continuing on friendly terms with the United States and or giving as much heed as possible to our representations.

There is another party, the Prussian war party, who are willing to defy and to fight the whole world before conceding the slightest modification of their plans to kill and destroy. This party raises the cry that the German people will not approve of any concessions to American opinion, and they seek to increase rather than to mollify the popular resentment at home against this country.

NEW GERMAN SUBMARINE PLANS.

As far as could be ascertained to-day from various persons who taily represent the Administration's viewpoint, to a degree at least, the he House is convinced that the German Government has decided upon bmarine course which may be summarized in the following manner:

There is no present intention of sinking any more large liners. The sale was sunk for the effect it would have upon British ship owners waring them into keeping their great vessels out of the war sone experiment appears to have succeeded to a marked extent.

The Admiralty purposes hereafter to attack freighters principally. Submarine commanders will be instructed to pick off all the cargo-carrying vessels that they meet, but in the case of American vessels to use great care in protecting the lives of the crews.
